Join our Practice Research Network

Community oncology practices working collaboratively to generate real-world data to advance evidence-based medicine and patient-centric care

Practice Research Network (PRN) overview

What:

- A network of community practices participating in non-interventional clinical research
- Practices interact exclusively with the research operations team from Cardinal Health as we conduct research studies on behalf of biopharmaceutical manufacturers
- Practices complete case report forms (CRFs) abstracting de-identified, HIPAA compliant, patient demographic, clinical and treatment data, which will be used in:
 - Real-world evidence generation for publication
 - Patient-reported outcomes research
 - Regulatory filings with the Food and Drug Administration
- Practices may also engage patients for recruitment into PRO studies

Why:

- Contribute data and collaborate to improve and advance evidence-based medicine and patient-centric care
- Potential authorship in conference presentations and scientific publications
- Gain access to the most recent drug development and PRO study results
- Earn revenue for your participation in the network pre-study assessment process and the individual research studies

Benefits of real-world research studies

Generate hypotheses for future clinical trials

Increase understanding of patient-reported outcomes

Determine real-world safety and effectiveness

Advance the understanding of the complexity of cancer care delivery
